

Melissa Boyle

Personal and Professional Leadership Development Specialist
NeuroLeadership Coach, Business Owner and Trainer

Melissa is a brain-based NeuroLeadership coach who is passionately committed to developing Emotional Intelligence and Life Balance through powerful, self-directed and solution focused coaching.

Melissa works with her clients to achieve what is most valuable to them, through developing strategies and applying actions that enable them to see measurable results. She is passionate about empowering and supporting individuals to gain the clarity, self-knowledge and skills to be revitalised in their business and personal growth journeys.

Melissa's past experience as an executive trainer, developing and running a construction company with her husband as well as her passion for learning and facilitating positive change gives Melissa a very comprehensive and unique range of experience, skillsets, techniques and tools to support clients in achieving their personal and professional goals.

With Melissa's guidance and knowledge of neuroscience, clients are able to set inspiring new goals and to feel supported through a journey of powerful, energising and effective conversations tailored to your individual circumstances and needs.

Her passion is in supporting and inspiring people to develop clarity in their vision and purpose. She strongly believes that self-awareness can be learnt and developed and a strong sense of self that is aligned with core values will empower her clients to effectively achieve individual goals.

"I have personally known Melissa Boyle for the past 6 years. Her personal and tailored approach in our business has been a godsend to the staff members she has spent time with. Her approach, patience and ability to listen when it matters most has improved careers, turned around marriages and recalibrated personal goals. I strongly support Mel as a life coach here at Ganellen. She is a prized asset to any developing business wanting to succeed in the 21st century"
